

2nd Course, 3rd Class

Wednesday, April 5

1. Homework. 1 video and usual feedback to me.
2. We took a peak at zodiac signs, particularly Taurus last month and we will be doing zodiac signs soon.

3. Question from Phillip:

Under traditional astrology, I would consider Pluto Moon combinations as potential to manipulate emotions. Under VA, what planets and vibrations would you consider for that? Is manipulation thus a potential symptom of Pluto? I can see emotions as a symptom of the Moon.

[My answer is below]

4. Let's take a midpoint structure. A randomly select Moo = Mar/Sat.

What does it mean in the natal chart, 8 5 7 9 11 13 and 17 vibe?

The planets are operating only in that vibration!!!!!!

5. "A burning question I've had, though, is how to figure out which aspects and patterns are THE most powerful in a person's chart and should be zoomed in on first. Several family members (and myself, too) have tons of very thick lines and patterns in so many vibrational charts that it's overwhelming, and I really don't know what to focus on first. And that's before we even get into power midpoint structures, aspected isotraps, and the like. "

6. Planetary pairs starting with Mars-Pluto. (We didn't get to this)

My answer to item #2 above:

I think it depends on the details of the emotional manipulation. For example, is it conscious or unconscious? Also, what is the goal of the emotional manipulation? A lot of advertising is emotional manipulation. Having saw a TV ad of a fellow with a deep gravelly voice say "Ford truck" with the truck going through rough terrain. The message appears to be that if you a red-blooded rugged American a Ford truck is for you. Emotional manipulation in personal relationships can have different motives, like getting someone to fall in love with your for their money. There is emotional manipulation by people who have such an intense craving that they do anything to fill the need, like a drug addict acting nicely or playing a role to get the money to satisfy the craving. Moon-Pluto often emotionally manipulates unconsciously but intensively to deflect, project and avoid dealing with inner drives that are deal with ugly issues that they would rather avoid.

Does that make sense? Any other ideas or questions about this?

So is Pluto often involved with manipulation?

19:12:55 From Ethan PS Tang to Everyone:

Replying to "So is Pluto often in..."

I think that all social interaction is manipulation, whether overt or covert

19:16:05 From Phillip Maxwell to Everyone:

Working only as well?

19:16:19 From Phillip Maxwell to Everyone:

Sorry, working alone as well?

experimenting with spices in cooking, sticking with the analogy

19:24:41 From Michele Marie to Everyone:

Play in a way that has quality

19:24:55 From Subhashish(Subs) Acharya to Everyone:

I am assuming what my neighbor does - hits the Boxing sandbag until he has sculpted a Santa Claus out of it after work.

19:27:05 From Richard and Victoria Smoot to Everyone:

experimenting with ingredients

19:27:59 From Subhashish(Subs) Acharya to Everyone:

Ah! This is what my neighbor used to do after work. Experimented with his guitar and tunes for 30 minutes (and was horrible at it)

19:29:15 From Michele Marie to Everyone:

Painting, using colour, quality making and building.

lots of quiet time but has to be doing and building something that lasts. Will have a favourite artist or mentor from past that inspired. Or a drive or skill

19:29:59 From Michael Spremulli to Everyone:

Would this be like "lock and key" theory? i.e. Mo-Mar-Sat "unlocks" access to the 5 vib by working quietly?
